What We Were Handed

Real structural problems — solved before a line of code was written

01

Broken Product Architecture

Every size variant was a separate product. 5 sizes = 5 duplicate listings. Catalog bloat, broken filters, bad UX — and a CRM import that would only make it worse.

02

No CRM ↔ Store Logic

Client wanted KeepinCRM as the single source of truth for inventory. No integration existed. Had to design the full data flow — products, options, filters, orders — from scratch.

03

Mockup Gaps

Design was missing key UI states: language switcher dropdown, cart/wishlist counters, product review form. Found and flagged before development started.

What We Built

Architecture, UI gaps, and product data — fixed before launch

MOCK-UP AUDIT

Analysed design before writing code

Identified structural issues, missing UI states, and device responsiveness gaps.

UI GAP FIXES

Added missing interface elements

Language switcher dropdown, cart/wishlist counters, product review form on product pages.

UX RESTRUCTURE

Redesigned review & navigation logic

3-column review grid, product images in listings, "Add Review" moved to product cards only.

VARIANT ARCHITECTURE

5 SKUs per size → 1 parent card

Redesigned product data model with size/color as modifications. Eliminated catalog bloat.

KeepinCRM ↔ OpenCart

Bidirectional sync — inventory in CRM, orders back automatically

SOURCE OF TRUTH

All stock & products managed in KeepinCRM

A sync toggle per product controls what gets pushed live. CRM always wins — store admin changes are overwritten on next sync.

AUTO IMPORT

Options, filters & multilingual fields auto-generated

Size, colour, type, season, collection — generated automatically from CRM field values. Dropdowns prevent data inconsistencies.

ORDER SYNC

Orders flow back into CRM automatically

New orders appear in KeepinCRM instantly. Status updates — packed, shipped, delivered — sync back to the customer-facing order page.

SEO Built Into the Architecture

Not added after launch — designed in from day one

URL STRUCTURE

Semantic, keyword-rich URLs

Human-readable slugs, no ID params, consistent hierarchy planned before dev.

TECHNICAL SEO

Sitemap, robots.txt & canonicals

Auto-generated sitemap, crawl directives, canonical tags on launch day.

MULTILINGUAL

UA/RU with hreflang

Each language indexed separately — doubled keyword surface area instantly.

SCHEMA MARKUP

Product & breadcrumb structured data

Rich snippets live within weeks — price, availability, brand in search results.

META AUTOMATION

Title & description templates

Auto-generated from product data — consistent patterns across all pages.

PERFORMANCE

WebP & lazy load

Core Web Vitals passed first audit. No post-launch remediation needed.

What Made the Difference

Results came fast because the foundation was right

01 Architecture-first thinking

We audited the mockup before writing a line of code. Product structure, CRM data model, and SEO hierarchy were locked in at the design stage — not patched in after launch.

02 CRM as the single source of truth

Building the integration correctly from day one meant the client could manage thousands of SKUs without touching the store admin. Operations scaled without extra dev work.

03 SEO that compounds

2,600 impressions in month one on a brand-new domain is not luck — it's the result of clean URLs, structured data, and crawlable architecture built into the theme from the start.
